CAUSE

When supervised release commenced in July 2005, the probation officer instructed the offender to notify our office with 72 hours of any change in employment (which is a standard condition of supervision). Additionally, due to Blair's history of engaging in acts of theft and fraud at some of her prior places of employment (which includes hotels), she was given strict instructions to notify the probation officer in advance of, or immediately after, taking a new position of employment so that probation could conduct a third-party risk evaluation. On March 22, 2006, the offender reported to the probation office and admitted that she has been working full-time for a hotel in Parsippany since January 2006 and failed to notify her probation officer of this change in employment within 72 hours. Furthermore, since the start of the supervised release term, the offender has made only two restitution payments totaling $70 (she is required to make monthly payments in the amount of $150). For this reason, the offender's restitution payment status is currently in default. In addition, the offender has consistently failed to submit monthly supervision reports and proof of legitimate income to the probation officer in a timely manner. The offender will be placed on a reporting schedule to facilitate collection of her paperwork and restitution payments, and she will be required to make a third-party risk notification to her current employer.
